

Arabs in America: Understanding the Arab American Community

The Arab World
An Overview

The Arab World: An Overview

- The Arab world is made up of 22 countries that are members of the Arab League with a population of over over 400 million
- The Arab world spans from North Africa to West Asia, giving way to diversity in faith, race, and dialects
- The three largest religious groups in the Arab world are Abrahamic: Judaism, Christianity, and Islam
- Faith, family, and community are essential components to Arab culture

The Arab World

THE ARAB WORLD

The Arab World can be divided into three major geographical regions:

- The Maghreb (North Africa)
- The Gulf Region
- The Levant

*Palestine is comprised of the West Bank and Gaza. Jerusalem is the contested capital of Palestine and Israel. Western Sahara is claimed by Morocco but disputed territory.

Who are the Arabs?

- Anyone who is a citizen of an Arab country or identifies as an Arab
- Culturally speaking, not everyone who lives in the Arab World sees themselves as Arab
- Not all Arabs are Muslim. Not all Muslims are Arab.
- The Middle East includes the Arab World in addition to other countries
- The majority of Arabs are united by a common language (with different dialects), and a shared identity in Arab history and similar customs

The Middle East Verses the Arab World

The category “Middle East” refers to a region of the world that is linked by a shared location, but not a common language. Therefore, Arab Americans should not be referred to as Middle Eastern Americans.

The Islamic World Versus the Arab World

Muslims and Arabs are two different classifications of people. In fact, of the top ten countries with the largest Muslim populations, only three are Arab. While Muslims can be found all over the world, they are predominantly found in parts of Africa and Asia.

Central Arab Cultural Elements

Three dominant themes can be found across the Arab World

FAITH

Faith plays a very important role in the lives of most Arabs, regardless of their religion.

FAMILY

Family is an extremely vital element to the lives of Arabs, not only as a source of support, but also of identity.

COMMUNITY

An extension of faith and family is community. It is a connection to culture for enjoyable and organizational purposes.

*History of Arab American
Immigration*

History of the Arab American Community

- The U.S., since its first formation, has had a long history of engagement with the Arab World.
- Changes in immigration law continue to have significant impacts on the Arab American community.
- Arab immigration to the U.S. has existed over 100 years.
- Each immigration wave has its own unique characteristics.

1ST Wave of Arab Immigration to the U.S.

Late 1800s – 1940s

The first immigration wave from the Arab World began in the late 19th and early 20th century.

The majority of these immigrants were from “Greater Syria”, which is present-day Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, and Palestine.

1st Wave Arab Immigration to the U.S.

The early Arab immigrants shared a number of common features, which included:

- Primarily Christians
- From rural areas
- With little to no education
- Mainly men, who were then followed by increasing numbers of women

2nd Wave of Arab Immigration to the U.S.

Late 1940s – 1960s

The 2nd wave of Arab immigrants encompassed more diverse characteristics, which included:

- More Muslims as well as more Christians
- From both urban and rural location
- More educated which resulted in a brain drain to the homeland

3rd Wave Arab Immigration to the U.S. 1970's

These immigrants came for political reasons as opposed to economic and educational purposes.

- This wave of immigration was the result of the U.S. war in Iraq, civil war in Syria, and continued conflicts in Egypt, Lebanon, and Palestine.

4th Wave Arab Immigration to the U.S. 2000s - Present

Today, Arab (and Muslim) immigration is part of the larger debate on immigration reform in the U.S.

- Much of this discussion is in the context of security concerns, and whether or not increased immigration from the Arab World (even in the form of student visas) should be allowed.

Arab Americans
and Religion

Christian Arab Americans

Based on various reports, 65-70% of Arab Americans are Christian.

In the past 10 years, most Arab immigrants have been Muslim as compared to 15 to 30 years ago when they were mostly Christian.

For those who follow the faith of their ancestors, they primarily fall into what is known as Eastern Rite churches.

Some churches, such as the Maronites, Melkites, and Chaldeans, fall under the Catholic Church in Rome. Others, such as the Antiochian Orthodox, Syriac Orthodox, and Egyptian Copts, fall under their own religious orders.

Other Arab Americans left their Eastern Rite churches for Roman Catholic churches as a matter of convenience.

Muslim Arab Americans

A Muslim is a follower of Islam which often is viewed as a singular religion. However, it is a diverse religion that has many important distinctions.

The major distinction is between Sunni and Shi'a Muslims. Like with all religions, the schisms occur as followers devote themselves to the messages of different leaders. A small part of Islam is the Druze which incorporates a variety of belief systems into their theology, described as a gnostic movement

30-35% of Arab Americans are Muslims. This does not account for all Muslim Americans, as many come from non-Arab nations, or are not of immigrant origins (such as the Nation of Islam).

Women and the Hijab

In Islam, the idea of wearing a hijab, or head covering, is rooted in modesty. Whether or not a woman wears a hijab, and the manner in which it is worn, is based more in local cultural customs. Some women will coordinate the hijab worn to match their outfit.

The wearing of the hijab has undergone ebbs and flows in Arab and Muslim society. In the period after September 11, 2001, many more American Muslim women adopted the hijab out of a sense of solidarity to combat the negative reactions aimed at Muslims.

Other women choose not to wear the hijab at all. This can have less to do with a sense of liberation than a personal choice. Also, some wear it in certain contexts only, like religious events or family gatherings.

Arab American Demographics

Who are the Arab Americans?

- Arab Americans are in many ways distinct from American society, and in other ways very similar.
- Not everyone with Arab ancestry identifies as Arab American
- There are close to 4 million Arab Americans in the United States
- According to the U.S. Census, Arab Americans are classified as “White” although they come from Asia and Africa

Where do Arab Americans live?

Arab Americans can be found throughout the United States, and literally in every state. However, there are certain areas that are known to have large Arab American communities. Not surprisingly, these are around major metropolitan areas, such as New York, Detroit, Los Angeles, Chicago, and Washington, DC. The largest concentration of Arab Americans can be found in Michigan, where some estimate that upwards of 500,000 Arab Americans.

Arab American Culture, Customs, and Traditions

Arab American Culture, Customs and Traditions

- Assimilation and acculturation are parts of the processes through which immigrants go through when arriving to a new society.
- While Arab culture is diverse, there are certain traits that are central to it.
- Most Arab Americans speak English as native speakers.
- Food plays a central part of Arab (American) culture and holiday traditions.

Arabic Language

Children and grandchildren of immigrant Arab Americans generally do not speak the Arabic language. However, an emphasis on maintaining Arabic in the household is strong with first generation Arab Americans and new immigrants.

The Arabic language is comprised of 28 letters, and is written from right to left.

Arab Americans and English Language

Arab Americans can see two general language patterns. For those who are descendants from the early immigration waves, English is the primary (and perhaps only) language spoken.

For more recent immigrants, they can live in a bi-lingual household. Census data indicates that almost 25% speak English less than “very well.” On the other hand, this means three-quarters do speak English very well.

Depending on the country of origin, other languages, such as French could be spoken in addition to Arabic.

Arabic Calligraphy

Arabic Calligraphy is the art form in which phrases in Arabic, often taken from the Quran, are written in a beautiful script. This is why it is also known as Islamic Calligraphy.

In its modern form, Arabic calligraphy can be found in the logos of companies, and in representations of animals.

Hospitality in Arab Culture

Hospitality is very important in Arab culture and this holds true for Arab Americans, as well. Providing food and drink, such as tea or coffee, is typical when visiting a home, or even business.

It is important that this hospitality is accepted and appreciated, as rejecting such attempts is a breach with customs and norms.

Greetings in Arabic and Arab Culture

Greetings in Arab culture can take on a variety of forms, depending on the context and familiarity between people. Often, a handshake in formal settings will be expected, although this can be withheld by persons who follow the religious tradition of not touching members of the opposite sex who are not related. In these settings, a slight nod, a right hand placed above the heart, or bow will be substituted.

For those who are close friends, a kiss on each cheek may occur. This can occur between men and between women. This is even the case between heads of state.

Arab American Holidays

Most celebrations for Arab Americans coincide with religious events and national holidays. These combine both Arab and American traditions, food, and family gatherings.

There are also events to celebrate their ancestral heritage and homeland. Such as mahrajans/festivals are opportunities for families to reunite, as well as persons of non-Arab ancestry to experience a taste of Arab culture.

Food for Special Occasions

As with other cultures, certain foods are associated with certain special occasions. These traditions remain throughout the generations, eliciting fond memories of childhood and homeland.

Mlabbas (Jordan almonds) are almond candies that are served mainly during weddings.

Ma'amoul, pastries filled with dates and nuts, is typically enjoyed during holidays, especially during Easter and Ramadan.

Deep-fried zalabieh and awwamat, served in syrup, is eaten for all occasions and is often made during Epiphany.

Many variations of baklava are enjoyed at all celebratory occasions.

In the Arab American Home

Within many Arab American homes, you can find elements of ethnic pride and ancestral heritage. This might be in the form of artifacts carried by immigrants, pictures of villages, and/or general symbols of Arab identity.

Issues Facing
Arab Americans

Stereotypes and the Media

Stereotypes of Arabs (and Muslims) pervade media in America. In many ways, Arabs are perhaps the most stereotyped group in the media. This is by no means a recent phenomenon, but one that has a long history and legacy.

The portrayal of Arabs and Arab Americans in news and entertainment media can be damaging to the understanding of Arab identity.

The roles of Arabs in film and television as terrorists, villains, or unnamed bystanders killed by US soldiers can perpetuates harmful stereotypes and indirectly relate all people of Arab background to the bad guys they see in the media.

The TV show Homeland has been accused of trafficking false images of the Arab world

The film American Sniper has been linked to hundreds of anti-Arab and anti-Muslim threats on Twitter

Hate Crimes Against Arab Americans

It can be difficult to know the number of hate crimes that have been committed against Arab Americans, largely because the FBI has only been tracking them since 2015. According to the FBI's statistics, hate crimes against American Muslims rose at least to 67%.

The Southern Poverty Law Center has also reported a sharp increase in anti-immigrant hate crimes against Arab, Muslim, and Sikh Americans (who are often confused as Arab or Muslim) since the 2016 presidential elections.

Bullying of Arab American Students

Despite the increased attention on bullying since a spate of teen suicides highlighted the problem a year ago, news reports and academic studies document dozens of examples in which school officials have dismissed Muslim bullying complaints. In some instances, teachers themselves are the bullies.

Among other examples, a substitute teacher at a school in Hillsborough County, Fla., was disciplined in 2007 for harassing a sixth-grader because his name was Islam. In 2006, a substitute teacher in Gaithersburg, Md., had to be escorted from a school after berating a group of students for speaking Arabic.

For Arab American and Muslim American students, bullying can be an everyday feature of life. This is further complicated by adults who can share in the biases possessed by those doing the bullying. Global events, such as wars, economic crises, inflammatory political rhetoric, coupled with cultural differences create a climate that is ripe for victimization of children.

In the end, group-based bullying is rooted in the larger social and cultural climate. Images experienced in movies, on television, video games, and music, as well as through the words of educators, create a kind of tacit approval targeting Arab and Muslim-American students is permissible, even admirable, when those actions are seen as patriotic.

*Arab American
Professions, Education, and Achievements*

Arab American Professions

While many early Arab immigrants sought opportunity in traditional immigrant routes of industrial work and homesteading, pack peddling (or peddling) became a hallmark. Peddlers would travel through the country side door to door, selling general products and 'novelties from the Holy Land' to customers. All what they needed was the determination to succeed, and a few goods to sell.

This eventually led to the opening of grocery stores, as peddlers looked for more stationary opportunities. Marriage and families also helped, providing the staff needed to run a store, creating a true family business and the achievement of their American Dream.

Arab American Professions

As with other immigrants, many Arab immigrants worked in manufacturing. After Henry Ford offered “$5 a day” for work, immigrants flocked to Detroit, Michigan to answer the call of higher wages. This led Detroit, and subsequently Dearborn (Michigan), to establishing a very large and diverse Arab-American community

Arab American Professions

Immigrant parents wanted a better and easier life for their children. They strongly encouraged them into more professional vocations. Primarily, Arab immigrants looked for their children to become doctors, lawyers, or engineers - jobs that were seen to provide a healthy income, reliable stability, and social status that were part of their American dream.

Doctors, lawyers, and engineers became the calling for many Arab American youth, helping to fulfill the hopes of their parents, and integrating them into American economic life.
